Cited Information: Joseph stated that the health risk thresholds for toxic air contaminants are 10 cancers per million and 1.0 for the hazard index. The air district does not have separate cumulative health risk thresholds, but Joseph indicated that the project-level thresholds can be used.

Joseph indicated that the air district's mass emissions thresholds can be used to evaluate cumulative impacts as well as project-level impacts. Cory asked, for example, if a project has emissions below the thresholds, would that project be considered to not have a significant cumulative impact? Joseph agreed that would be the case.
